MISSING There's big bucks in store for the person who can turn in Sidney Crosby's missing hockey gear.

Reebok Canada is offering a $10,000 reward, no questions asked, for the return of the stick and glove Crosby used to score his winning goal in last weekend's gold-medal game against the U.S.

The equipment disappeared after the hockey star tossed his stick and ripped off his gloves to celebrate Canada's Olympic victory.

"The stick and glove are priceless," said Len Rhodes, vice-president and general manager for Reebok Hockey CCM. "There's absolutely no substitute for that exact stick and glove."

Angry cabbies want action on insurance premiums

ANDREAS MORSE for Metro Edmontor

metronews.ca

Local cab drivers are fed up with paying large insurance premiums and are willing to take action. About 200 angry cab drivers gathered at Maharaja Banquet Hall yesterday to discuss what to do about soaring insurance premiums.

"They're charging us about $140 for insurance every week," said Balraj Manhas, president of the United Cabbies Association of Edmonton. "Even if someone's been driving for 30 or 40 years, it's the same payment amount for everybody."

Manhas said the Edmonton Taxi Service Group — which runs Yellow Cab, Barrel Taxi, and Prestige Cabs — charges a driver $8,000 for any at-fault accident that's happened in the last three years.

The group of cab drivers voted unanimously to pursue a lawsuit against the Edmonton Taxi Service Group as well as unify all "We need something to help us right away."

Living with brain cancer has been an extraordinarily difficult ordeal for him and his wife, Deborah Hurford. What's made matters even more trying is that while others in Alberta receive cancer treatment for free, Pankow pays approximately $10,000 a month.

"I don't know anybody who could afford it," said Pankow, who was first diagnosed in January 2000 after having a seizure.

At the hospital, Pankow sits beside colon cancer pa-tients who don't pay for their treatments.

One of Pankow's surgeries can cost from $76,000 to $84,000.

Key role for CSIS in Taliban questioning: Report

Officers of the Canadian Security Intelligence Serv ice have played a crucial and long-standing role as interrogators of a vast swath of captured Taliban fighters, The Canadian Press has learned.

The spies began working side-by-side with a unit of military police intelligence officers as the Afghan war spiralled out of control in 2006, according to heavily "We're not talking the normal police interview, we're talking interrogations, which (censored) were doing, not (military police)." Excerpt of edited report censored witness transcripts filed with the Military Police Complaints Commission.

The spy agency's previously unknown role adds a new dimension to the controversy about the handling and possible torture of prisoners by Afghan security forces.

It also raises more questions about early years in Kandahar when the Canadian military found itself mired in a guerrilla war it had not expected to fight.

Maj. Kevin Rowcliffe, former staff adviser to Canada's overseas operations commander, told investigators there were questions about how much experience the officers had in grilling prisoners.

There was a lot of discussion in my headquarters about who was qualified to do interrogations, because we're not talking the normal police interview, we're talking interrogations, which (censored) were doing, not (military police)," says an edited transcript of the Dec. 6, 2007, interview. Military police "were involved in that, but they weren't necessarily involved in interviewing or interrogation related issues: that would be (censored) or some other parade that had special training in interrogation.'

Sources familiar with the unedited version say the blanked-out references are to CSIS.

Defence Minister Peter MacKay acknowledged the military has "relied heavily on other departments, including CSIS.

Air India perjury trial to start today

TERRORISM Twenty-five years after Air India Flight 182 fell from the sky off the coast of Ireland, the legal saga stemming from Canada's worst mass murder continues this week as a key witness in the trial of two men acquitted in the bombing is tried for perjury.

Inderjit Singh Reyat is charged with lying in 2003 during the trial of Ripudaman Singh Malik and Ajaib Singh Bagri. Malik and Bagri were acquitted of all charges connected with the 1985 bombing of the Air India plane and an explosion at a Tokyo airport.

Revat was called as a Crown witness at the trial, but the indictment for his perjury charge lists 27 instances in which he is alleged to have lied under oath, mostly dealing with his insistence that he didn't remember details of the bombing plot or the name of one of the men involved.

Reyat was charged with perjury in February 2006, nearly a year after the acquittals. THE CANADIAN PRESS

U.S. tops up funds to make embassy barricades less ugly

OTTAWA The United States is kicking in half a million dollars towards beautifying the ugly barricades around its embassy in Ottawa.

The large cement blocks cut off a lane of traffic on a stretch of Sussex Drive in the capital's Byward Market neighbourhood.

They have been a bone of contention for local businesses since they were put in place as an added security measure following the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks on New York and Washington. The barricades will be replaced with "visually pleasing" bollards that will still keep cars from approaching the gleaming fortress-like compound that sits in the heart of Ottawa's tourist district. The total cost of the project, which will include a new four-block bike path on Sussex, is just more than $3 million. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nothing but excuses

t's been 20 months to the day since the provincial government pledged $2 billion in

"Green TRIP" funding for transit, but the program still hasn't produced much of anything except excuses.

Announced in July 2008, just before the record peak in oil prices, Green TRIP was created when the province seemed to have more money than it could possibly spend. By the time that money needed to be committed in the formal budget process, however, oil prices - and government revenue projections - had tanked.

The easy way out was

In the two years since Green TRIP was announced, the city has been busy at work, prioritizing existing urban areas and planning for LRT to Mill Woods, West Edmonton, and NAIT. The province hasn't produced so much as an application form.

There's also a push at council to see the LRT com-

Ultimately, the problem is that the provincial government holds the purse strings and can do whatever it pleases — like favouring suburbs and opening up the public pot of money to private proposals. With official decision criteria yet to be released, it is free to criticize proposals indiscriminately.

Of course, the province will eventually wear out this excuse and have to move on to another one.

But the longer this drags on, the more people will realize what the provincial government would be wise to admit: It just doesn't care that much about tran-

Sitting with Caroline in that far-off village, I suddenly understood the power of the women around me.

As individuals, they struggled to make ends meet, but together they made each other — and their community - stronger.

Canadians — men and women — can learn so much from them. I have often felt that, as one person, I couldn't make a difference. It took a trip across the globe to understand

Voters, polling station attacked in Iraq

BAGHDAD Iragis defied insurgents who lobbed hand grenades at voters and bombed a polling station yesterday in an attempt to intimidate those taking part in elections that will determine whether their country can overcome deep sectarian divides as U.S. forces prepare to leave.

The conclusion of the vote, however, did not spell an immediate end to political uncertainty.

It could be days until results come in and with the fractured nature of Iraqi politics, it could take months to form a govern-

Shiites Sunnis and seemed united in one way yesterday — defiance in the face of violence. Many came out of polling booths waving fingers dipped in purple ink in a now-iconic image synonymous with Iraq's democracy. In one Baghdad neighbourhood, relatives who had just lost a family member in a bombing walked down to the polling booth to vote.

Mourners gather around the coffin of Ali Yahya, 20, who was killed in a bomb blast in Baghdad yesterday.

Still the violence that shook Baghdad served as a reminder of the insurgency's persistence and adaptability.

Insurgents used mostly rockets, mortars and explosive-filled plastic bottles hidden under trash to terrorize voters on their way to the polls. With those tactics, they managed to get around a vehicle ban in place across the capital for most of the day and killed 36 people, almost all of them in Baghdad.

China warns Hong Kong plan by pro-democracy activists in Hong Kong to use a special election as a de facto referendum on reform is a threat to stability in the former British colony.

While Hong Kong returned to Chinese rule in 1997, it maintains a separate political system and enjoys Western-style civil liberties typically denied on the mainland. But Beijing has continued to deny full democracy. Hong Kong's leader is chosen by an 800-member committee stacked with pro-China figures and its legislature is half-elected, half-picked by special interest groups.

Pro-democracy activists have argued for years that the wealthy financial hub of seven-million people is mature enough to choose its own leaders.

In their latest campaign, five opposition legislators - one from each of Hong Kong's five major electoral districts - resigned in January, triggering a special election. Opposition par-ties plan to field candidates in the byelection, hoping to turn the territory-wide contests into a de facto referendum on democratic reform.

"This is a total violation of mainstream public opinion that wants stability, harmony and development," Peng Qinghua, the head of China's liaison office in Hong Kong, said when he met with Hong Kong delegates on the sidelines of the annual meeting of China's parliament in Beijing on Saturday. In a more veiled criti-

Discovered in Norway in 2004, the fossil suggests that the polar evolved recently and adapted at a rapid rate to climatic change. Metro spoke to two of the scientists involved in the fossil studies, Stephan Schuster and Charlotte Lindqvist, to find out more about the past and the future of the Arctic's top predator.

The fossil shows that polar bears survived an interglacial period warmer than the current. However, "The fossil is a single find," stresses Schuster. "We cannot base the entire viability of a species on it."

In that period of warm-

Over the years, polar bears have adapted to their environment. They now have a layer of fat of 11 cm thick that keeps bear warm, especially when swimming and hunting ing, there were still areas polar bears could live in, notably where the fossil was discovered, Svalbard in the archipelagos island of Norway.

The sediment on the fossil shows that the climate, therefore flora and fauna at the time were similar to today.

"This does not mean that we will have polar bears roaming around tropical forests," says Lindqvist, "They survived because they had a suitable habitat that was overall still relatively cold."

The discovery of the fossil led many to jump to the conclusion that polar bears would not be affected

"People need to understand how mosaic climate is. It is unlikely global warming will lead to polar bears becoming extinct, but their numbers could dramatically go down. The crucial limiting factor is the loss of habitat," explains Schuster.

"We cannot speak in the future. Global warming is happening at an accelerated pace and we have no idea how it will evolve. If things stay the way they are, polar bears will rapidly lose habitat, and that, along with pollution, is their biggest threat" says Lindqvist.

And according to Lindqvist, "global warming is causing the arctic ice to melt, meaning that the regions where polar bears hunt are constantly going away. Yes, polar bears could evolve, but this is not something that happens overnight."

U.S. company looking to harness people power

BEN KNIGHT for Metro Canada

Ever get caught in a revolving door? Or swatted in the backside as the door speeds up just as you're slowing down? These things are powerful.

Fluxxlab — a pioneering partnership between Columbia University master's degree holders Carmen Trudell and Jennifer Broutin — is trying to harness that power. Their flagship product, the Revolution Door, generates electricity as office workers pour through it each day.

"Jenny and I were in a class called Responsive Kinetic Architecture," Trudell recalls. "People were trying to design new windows, floors and walls to perform at a higher level of energy efficiency. We decided to find an existing condition inside of a building to be used to produce a small amount of electricity."

Generators spin. So the women went looking for anything in a typical office building that goes around in circles all day long. They found it — right at the entrance.

"Fluxxlab's work has been focused on local energy harvesting — primarily from people," says Trudell. "People move, and make kinetic energy. We figure out ways to convert that into power."

The door is still in development. The main prototype currently generates enough juice to power 16 compact fluorescent light bulbs for ten hours. But creating electricity isn't the only point.

"The output from the Revolution Door is relatively small, but it's great for educational purposes. It makes people aware that the food that we put in our mouths and the fat that's stored in our bodies are all part of the same energy cycle as the sun, the grass and coal-burning power plants."

And while the door hasn't yet been installed in any actual office buildings, the idea is certainly generating interest.

"Getting clients has not been the problem," Trudell smiles. "Vornado, a huge real-estate developer in New York, is interested, and even Mayor Michael Bloomberg has contacted us about possibly helping with his plan to green City Hall."

Fluxxlab has also developed the Personal Power Plant, a hand-cranked generator for recharging iPods and cell phones.

"We've had people write to us and say they've attached their Personal Power Plants to their bicycles to use as a dynamo. They're taking our circuit and modifying it, which is really exciting. We hope our projects will go on and have lives more exciting than we originally envisioned."

Paper money going plastic

Bank of Canada eyes bills printed on polymer but won't name its supplier

The Bank of Canada says it wants to start making plastic money because plastic bills last longer and are cleaner than paper notes.

But while the bank won't say who its supplier is going to be, an Australian firm that is a world leader in plastic notes is undergoing a probe for paying kickbacks to obtain contracts.

Securency International Pty Ltd. — a company half-owned by the Reserve Bank of Australia — sidelined two top executives last May and brought in KPMG to conduct a probe of its operations using agents to sell its products to foreign governments.

Julie Girard, a spokeswoman for the Bank of Canada, said the bank can't comment on who will supply its bills because contractual details are still being ironed out.

But she said the bank hopes to issue plastic notes, which have been used in Australia since the 1980s, in about 18 months.

They don't absorb grime the way paper notes do and they last two to three times longer, she said.

Five- and ten-dollar bills currently last one to two years; twenties last two to four years and $100 bills go for seven to nine years.

Giant billboards taken down amid legal battle

ADVERTISING Five giant billboards have been removed from buildings in Hollywood near the site of the Academy Awards after Los Angeles prosecutors charged four people and four companies with hanging the so-called supergraphics illegally.

The ads for Asics athletic gear that hung horizontally across several storefronts near the Kodak Theater where the Oscars were held yesterday were all removed by Saturday.

Three of the four people

City law bans the installation of supergraphics, which are vinyl images draped over buildings.

Autos The country's auto dealers association says General Motors of Canada should admit its mistakes and reverse plans to close many of its retailers after the company's parent suggested it erred in more than half of the decisions to shut down U.S. stores under a restructuring plan.

Rick Gauthier, president of the Canadian Automobile Dealers Association, said Friday it's hard to believe that GM made the right decision here in terminating the 240 retailers it targeted for nonrenewal of franchise agreements, in view of a major shift by parent GM.

Parent GM announced earlier it will reinstate 661 dealers out of 1,100 it slated for closing in the U.S. last year as part of a survival plan to become profitable again.

GMs set to tackle hockey headshots

NHL The issue of headshots in hockey will be put under the microscope when the NHL's 30 general managers gather this week.

It will be one of the many topics discussed during the annual GM meetings from today to Wednesday and seems to be the one most likely to result in a potential rule change. It's something the GMs have grappled with a few times already. Former NHL Players' Association executives Paul Kelly and Glenn Healy raised the issue during a presentation at these meetings a year ago, saying it was the most important concern for players.

However, it didn't gain much traction then or during a subsequent meeting at the Stanley Cup final in June. The nature of the conversation changed when the group convened in November, prompted in part by a couple vicious hits early in the season notably the one Mike Richards put on David Booth.

At that time, the managers began acknowledging that change might be in the air.

"(The conversation) was quite a bit different. Some of the guvs who have taken a strong position that it may take hitting out of the game have adjusted their views a little bit," Carolina Hurricanes GM Jim Rutherford said then.

"If we continue down what was talked about today then we will see a change ... I think if we got the direction that it appeared we were going, you will see a change for next year.

Rutherford is one of eight GMs who will be tasked with discussing various aspects of headshots before it is tackled by the larger group. A decision could then be made to recommend a rule change. which would need to be approved by the competition committee and the league's board of governors.

Kim Campbell's journey to the political top

LEADERSHIP Kim Campbell made history as the first female prime minister in the history of Canada. Here's what she says about what she says about being powerful and being a woman in today's world

"In high school I was elected the first female president of the student council, which made me realize that I could be involved in politics in other ways. Local government is a great way of cutting your teeth in politics: You know your constituents and your decisions have an immediate impact. People yell at you, but you don't need thick skin; you just need perspective.

"After several years of local politics in British Columbia. I became Canada's first female minister of justice and minister of defence. (Soon) I was running for the leadership of my party (the old Progressive Conservative Party), it was high-stakes poker. Political re-porters are some of the most conservative people I've met. I had two things against me: I wasn't from a big city, and I was a woman. They treated me like, 'We didn't make you. Where did vou come from?'
